Tiny city, big impact: Arxan emerges as cross-cultural bridge

Tucked away in the northwestern corner of Xing'an league in north China's Inner Mongolia autonomous region, Arxan ranks among China's "tiniest city" by population - just 28,600 residents - yet exerts a disproportionate influence in tourism and cultural exchanges.

Once a remote border town, Arxan has transformed in recent years into a magnet for visitors drawn by pristine natural beauty and commitment to sustainable development. Its unique mix of volcanoes, crater lakes, vast forests, and thermal springs has earned it a reputation as a "healing destination," especially among travelers from neighboring Mongolia.

For O Adiya, a Mongolian businessman and president of the chamber of commerce in Dornod, Mongolia, Arxan stands out among the many places he has visited in China. "The natural scenery is absolutely breathtaking. For many Mongolians, Arxan is an ideal travel destination," he said.

Nestled on the southwestern slopes of the Greater Khingan Mountains, Arxan offers a rare convergence of forest and grassland civilizations. Visitors can hike through dense woods, stroll across sweeping grasslands, and marvel at dramatic rock formations and snow-covered peaks. In winter, naturally heated mineral springs with a variety of temperatures and therapeutic properties become especially popular.

"Every year, many Mongolian tourists enter through the Arxan border port," said Tang Xin, deputy head of a border inspection team at the city's immigration inspection station. Beyond shopping, most visitors seek the natural landscapes and therapeutic springs, Tang added.

"September offers peak scenery - when the forests are ablaze with color, like nature's very own palette," he said.

Local businesses have seized the opportunity to tailor experiences to cross-border visitors. Fu Lihong, a local tourism service provider, has developed customized wellness packages featuring hot springs and traditional therapies. "Mongolians value traditional Mongolian medicine, which recognizes the health benefits of thermal springs and medicinal baths," Fu explained. "This drives Arxan's geothermal resorts' popularity."

To accommodate rising visitor numbers, the Arxan border port, once only open seasonally, for eight months a year, now operates year-round.

Arxan's development is rooted in a larger transformation. Formerly a major timber industry hub, the city pivoted to ecological protection after China's nationwide natural forest conservation program took effect. Today, with forest coverage above 80 percent and vegetation exceeding 95 percent, Arxan is both a biodiversity haven and a ecotourism model. Leveraging its robust green industries, Arxan is cultivating an outward-facing ecological culture.

The city's lush forests also provide a safe haven for local wildlife. Winter visitors might spot Mongolian gazelles, red deer, and roe deer wandering along forest trails - just a few of the many wild animals thriving in the protected habitat.

Environmental cooperation has become a cornerstone of foreign exchanges between Xing'an league and neighboring Dornod. As Mongolia advances a campaign to plant 1 billion trees, the cold-resistant, high-survival-rate tree species native to the Greater Khingan Mountains - like spruce and larch - have emerged as ideal choices for reforestation.

"Building a greener homeland is a shared aspiration for China and Mongolia," said Xiao Cuiyan, head of the foreign affairs office of Xing'an league. "The resilient trees of the Greater Khingan Mountains have become 'envoys of friendship,' representing both ecological hope and cultural bonds."

According to Xiao, the league is actively partnering with Mongolian partners to provide saplings and expertise, with the goal of planting these green seeds across the Mongolian steppe.

Located at the intersection of China,

Mongolia, and Russia, Arxan has long served as a gateway for cultural exchanges.

With a rich history of cross-border interaction, Xing'an league remains a fertile ground for people-to-people ties. In recent years, it has hosted a range of major events and cultural exchanges, including the China-Mongolia-Russia cultural and arts week, subregional basketball tournaments, and performances of Mongolian long songs.

"China, Russia, and Mongolia are close neighbors connected by mountains and rivers. We share a common future and long-standing friendships," Xiao said. "Here in Xing'an, the most beautiful scenery lies not just in nature, but in the spirit of openness, inclusiveness, and harmony of the people." (By Fan Wei, Jiang Bo, Wu Yong, Tian Liang)

Quezon youth group opposes DOE's reissuance of moratorium exemption of coal project in Atimonan

Quezon City, Philippines — The Philippine Movement for Climate Justice (PMCJ) and Kabataan para sa Kalikasan ng Atimonan (KAPAKANAN) filed an opposition letter at the Department of Energy (DOE) after the latter reissued the exemption of Atimonan One Energy (A1E) from the coal moratorium recently.

In April 2025, MGen received an official communication from DOE revoking its confirmation of exemption for the 1,200-megawatt (MW) coal project in Atimonan, Quezon. The project's Acknowledgement of Non-Coverage from the 2020 coal moratorium has been recalled for further review following the government's policies and programs.

The 2020 DOE Coal Moratorium Advisory provides that exemptions apply to coal projects that meet any of the following criteria. First, committed projects listed by the DOE before the moratorium that have achieved financial closing or begun construction. Second, existing coal plant complexes with firm expansion plans and secured sites. Third, indicative projects with substantial accomplishments include notarized land acquisition or lease agreements, approved permits, and resolutions from the host local government unit (LGU) and regional development council (RDC).

PMCJ, in previous statements, proved that the A1E project does not qualify for exemption. It is a greenfield development with no prior operations, no proven expansion record, and lacks the necessary approvals and a notarized land agreement. The project's construction has been delayed since 2019 due to unresolved legal and environmental issues, and its PSA was among those voided by the Supreme Court.

"The A1E project should not be exempted from the coal moratorium, as none of the exemptions apply to it. For the DOE to reverse course is to provide special treatment to the project in clear violation of the coal moratorium. What is so special about the A1E coal project that the DOE has reneged on its previous position of applying the coal moratorium to the project, and greenlighted its construction despite legal challenges and widespread opposition?" PMCJ Legal team head Atty. Aaron Pedrosa said.

Local communities, groups, and the whole province of Quezon have long been rejecting the A1E coal project, arranging protests, forums, and filing legal complaints in an attempt to avert the heightening of fossil-fuel-related pollution and further ecological destruction of their area. Following the historic Advisory Opinion on Climate Change released by the International Court of Justice, which was strongly lobbied into courtrooms by 27 law students, this action to oppose the project by the Atimonan youth is an act to concretize and urge the government to regulate and fully implement the fossil fuel phaseout in the Philippines.

"The project's rebranding from coal to liquified natural gas (LNG), then back to coal, was widely seen as an attempt to exploit regulatory gaps, circumvent requirements, and sneak its way to construction and operation. Sec. Sharon Garin is grossly misinformed in her support for the project. Her predecessor was sued for bending the coal moratorium just to allow the A1E coal plant. She must not commit the same mistake. The coal moratorium provides her the unmistakable mandate of once and for all shelving the project," Pedrosa stressed.

ONCE UPON A TIME, WE DIDN'T CARE

In a province known for its rich history borne out of the country's distinct revolution, there lies stories from the ground, personalities from the art, and promises from the heart that captured the pity of every Caviteño.

Cavite has homed not only famous foods, tourist spots, unique diction, and celebrated people like Emilio Aguinaldo, Julian Felipe, Mariano Tres, and many more, but also promises that brought false hopes to its people for longstanding years in the enduring same political names of dynasties like Tolentinos, Revillas, and Remullas.

This three prominent political families in Cavite were the long-lived kings sitting in power with little to no improvement made for their province as long as how their 'kababayans' view them differ outshined by their popularity, and not by their service.

The same names that was also mentioned in the investigative report published by the Philippine Center for Investigative Journalism in naming some of the 'obese' political families in the Philippines due to continuous swapping of roles that allows them to stay in power and expand their political influence by pocketing the allocated funds for their own interests and make "sufferings" a room for false improvement.

As to some journalists' would call it, the drowning season, comes after the summer break where farmers have to harvest all of their crops and wait when the typhoons will end so that their crops wouldn't go to waste and where most of the students wade the waters from gutter going to school – well, in the far flung provinces, students have to cross more than two rivers just to get to school – and flood the comment section of their LGU's page when rain starts to pour down, all by pleasing to suspend the class for the day or coming.

At first glance, we thought remaining professional was a thing to keep the momentum and order of professional service to the public going – until it wasn't. When the page of the LGU of Cavite has hopped into the current generation's lingo, we tolerated it. But when it was taken into a national set up after years of tolerating, it's just that "it wasn't giving".

It was July 23, 2025 when its incumbent Secretary, Jonvic Remulla of Department of Local and Interior Government made a humorous post that drew flak on social media about the class and work suspension announcement cause of bad weather. Although he apologized for what he did stressing that he wasn't downplaying what his constituents were going through, the fact that his intention of reminding them and setting the mood lighter isn't the right time to play most especially when you're not the one whose house is submerged due to poor infrastructure and disaster response.

Morally and professionally, one wouldn't joke around someone's agony even if you are close with each other. That doesn't give a right for someone to make it as a pun just to lighten the mood of other people that do not even care what life the other has. It just makes no sense. Also, coupled with now-infamous wronged way of communication, if, only if, the DILG communications team were properly managed – there was a chance for this fiasco to be prevented. And if the untolerated case was already a start up for people not condoning the actions, it would already be a best avenue to call out those in power to properly allocate the funds in the years of the bad services and false projects they manifested, bad publicity, and the short-term band-aid solution they were always repackaging when midterm elections are looming.

And as to properly quote from one of the Philippine local media websites, The Assortedge, "Filipinos deserve a system that protects them, not just stories that praise how they survive."

That the idea of getting hit by these disasters over and over again throughout the years, with the same depressing, catastrophic, and fatal effects – now are in all hopes for us to learn something from the untolerated case and choose the right leaders that will save us, so that our shared stories of suffering, if professionally voiced out, could live happily ever after.

Hope Beneath the Surface: Catfish Farming Brings Livelihood and Rehabilitation to PDLs at BJMP COD City Jail

A transformation is unfolding inside the walls of the BJMP Cagayan de Oro City Jail – Male Dormitory. Through the Utilization of High-Density Production and Processing Technologies of African Catfish, a new chapter of hope, dignity, and second chances is being written for Persons Deprived of Liberty (PDLs).

Developed by Dr. Arlyn Mandas-Tacubao of Saxonylyn Scifish Farm, a DOST Region XII SETUP-assisted firm, the project introduces modern aquaculture systems to prepare PDLs for productive lives after incarceration.

With the support of the Department of Science and Technology (DOST) Region X, this initiative provides not only a sustainable livelihood but also a concrete path to rehabilitation and reintegration.

Using cylindrical fiber-glass tanks equipped with self-cleaning technology, the project allows high-density production of African Catfish (Clarias gariepinus) while conserving water and space. Every three months, each batch yields approximately 50 kilograms of catfish, creating a steady supply of both food and income.

To date, the project has provided livelihood training to 200 PDLs, with 50 to 100 currently undergoing training and five PDLs managing daily maintenance. These efforts contribute to meaningful skill development, discipline, and renewed purpose among the participants.

Carlota City, Bago City, Kanlaon City and Moises Padilla town.

Victor Lim and Bacolod City Mayor Greg Gasataya also presided over donation of a new 7-storey, 100-feet hydraulic high-rise ladder capacity modern fire truck to the Bacolod Filipino Chinese Volunteer Fire Brigade from the Dr. Manuel S. Lo family of Grace Pharmacy Bacolod and Merzci

"This outpouring of support reflects our community's unwavering bayanihan spirit," stated FFCCII President Victor Lim. "When any Filipinos suffer, we should all stand united—delivering not just aid, but hope for fast and full recovery."

The mobilization underscores the Filipino Chinese community's deep commitment to national resilience, targeting both immediate relief and long-term rehabilitation for thousands affected by the disaster.

Together, these events highlight Cavite's growing role as a center for youth basketball development. Player pathways are moving beyond local courts to national exposure—and potentially international experience. Coach development ensures that rising talent is guided by capable and ethically trained mentors, while grassroots programming, including Scholastic Basketball Camp, promotes inclusion, skill-building, and values on and off the court. From selection camps and coach clinics to possible overseas training, Cavite is not just building basketball teams—it's building a community of committed athletes, leaders, and dreamers.

SBP Coaches Academy Level 2: Developing Coaches Across Region 4A

On August 23-24, Cavite will host the SBP Coaches Academy Level 2, open to mentors from across Region 4A. This two-day seminar aims to enhance knowledge in court strategy, coaching skills, and athlete care—a critical component of strengthening grassroots basketball in the region.

ORDER

Submitted for resolution of this Court is the Motion for Leave of Court to Serve Summons by Publication filed by the plaintiff through counsel from the Office of the Solicitor General, praying that the said motion be granted.

Finding the said motion be with merit and in order, the same is hereby GRANTED. Considering that there are unknown co-owners impleaded as defendants in this case and their exact whereabouts cannot be ascertained, the service of summons by publication may be allowed under the rules.

Under the Section 16, Rule 14 of the Revised Rules on Civil Procedure, in any action where the defendant is designated as an unknown owner, or the like, or whenever his or her whereabouts are unknown and cannot be ascertained by diligent inquiry, within ninety (90) calendar days from the commencement of the action, service may, by leave of court, be effected upon him or her by publication in a newspaper of general circulation and in such places and for such time as the court may order.

The Court is convinced that the plaintiff exerted diligent efforts to locate the unknown co-owners of defendants Lourdes Jimenez and Florentino Crudo, and thus, service of summons by publication is warranted.

Let Summons be issued to the unknown defendants and the same be published, together with the copy of the complaint and its attachments, once in a newspaper of general circulation.

Atty. Joseph Angelo J. Guillen, Branch Clerk of Court, is hereby directed to issue the said summons within five (5) days from today and to furnish the plaintiff with a copy of the same along with a copy of the complaint.

For purposes of publication, the plaintiff is likewise directed to coordinate with the Office of the Clerk of Court, Regional Trial Court Imus City, Cavite for the details and instructions as regards the duly accredited newspapers of general circulation for the publication of the summons.

SO ORDERED.

Issued this 28th day of May 2025 in Imus City, Cavite.
